CCC Art: Artists of the Civilian Conservation Corps - Marshall Davis. Duxbury, Kathleen. Duxbury Media, 2014, ISBN 0986003840, 190pp.

This book explains the genesis of the CCC art program, and pays tribute to the dedicated New Dealers who navigated through endless government red tape to make it work. A remarkable story emerges of one young, untried artist, Marshall Davis, who found his footing and future once he connected with the three C's. He would become the longest associated and most prolific of the CCC artists. His many poignant and humorous illustrations are instrumental in the telling of the real story of the CCC. Robert Pasquill Jr., a Forest Archaeologist for the U.S. Forest Service, Montgomery, Al., has put together a 20-minute video commemorating the CCC's 75th anniversary. "A Great and Lasting Good". This video celebrates the accomplishments of the CCC, whose legacy lives on throughout the nation. The video uses still photographs to illustrate how desperate young people achieved social and natural, preservation and developed minds through education and conservation to create "A Great and Lasting Good."

This film would make a fine presentation for anyone wanting a program on the CCC and is available here

Robert (Bob) has also written two new books on the New Deal regarding the CCC and the Resettlement Administration:
